I wish to have a pop-up tent trailer

David, 5
neuroblastoma

David was diagnosed with Neuroblastoma, a cancer that develops and is found in several areas of the body. In the beginning stages of his condition, David's parents had noticed that he began to have problems with his balance and was bruising easily and frequently. After many visits to the emergency room and countless exams, David received an MRI and CT scan, which revealed his diagnosis with a critical illness. This diagnosis answered many unknown concerns for David's pain and instability. He was quickly admitted to the hospital and underwent several cycles of chemotherapy, followed by radiation. After a trying journey into a healthier state of existence, David is now in remission!

David has an adventurer's drive for strength and justice! David loves the color red, which reminds him of his favorite food: apples! He also enjoys watching Veggie Tales and greatly admires action movies. Playing soccer and tag are two things that bring David joy, not to mention cheering for his favorite professional football team and snacking on skittles candy.

David has a passion for exciting adventures as well as for spending quality time with his family and wants to show that love through a vessel of adventure. In order to achieve maximum joy and excitement, David desires to have a pop-up tent trailer that would enable him to travel wherever his big heart desires! He could go to the mountains, the beach, and to visit more family as he travels the limitless regions of his dreams. David cannot wait to see his heartfelt wish come to life and take his family along for the adventure of a lifetime through the use of his very own joy-mobile!
